County Supervisor Kenneth L. Hahn this week had received the commendation of Torrance Mayor Albert Isen for his support of a new formula for allocating funds to be used in financing a program of supervised recreation on school grounds after hours.

"You are to be congratulated upon your decision to reappraise the past methods for allocation of appropriations for community recreation," Mayor Isen wrote to Supervisor Hahn. "The community recreation program was placed in effect in 1950 as a means of providing children with supervised recreation after school hours, on week-ends and during vacation periods, Supervisor Hahn explained.

"Los Angeles County contributes a major share of the cost of maintaining this fine program so that the children throughout the county will have well-directed and supervised recreational activities on school grounds," Supervisor Hahn stated. "Under the old formula, Torrance has received $4,822 each year from the county. This amount, which was set in 1950, had not been increased over the years even though the present school child population of Torrance exceeds the total population when the program was instituted in Torrance. The new formula bases the amount of County funds on the average daily school attendance, Supervisor Hahn stated. The new allocation for Torrance, beginning next July 1, will be $13,125.
